

MEILLER Group

HEALTH AND SAFETY GROUP POLICY

The family-owned MEILLER company, founded in 1850, can look back on a long tradition. From the very beginning, MEILLER has set itself the goal of developing innovative and sustainable products with high customer value for the construction and waste management industries.

Through the manufacture and distribution of tipper bodies and tipper trailers, the globally proven MEILLER hydraulics, as well as high-quality elevator doors, MEILLER has established itself as a global market leader.

Taking into account the needs of all employees has been part of the company's history since the founding of MEILLER and is of central importance in line with our values. For this reason, occupational health and safety is an important component of successful business activities for the MEILLER Group. This includes the consistent implementation of strategies to prevent accidents, injuries and work-related illnesses.

MEILLER is actively committed to ensuring health and safety through the following commitments:

Based on our core corporate values in the Code of Conduct, we promote environmentally and safety-conscious behaviour among all employees.

In order to meet our high standards of environmental protection and occupational health and safety, we provide the necessary resources at all locations and define clear responsibilities at each organizational level.

We comply with all applicable legal regulations and try to exceed them wherever possible.

We expect our suppliers and business partners to take responsibility for the health and safety of their employees in order to maintain their well-being and prevent accidents, injuries and work-related illnesses. In addition, they should monitor the remuneration, age and working hours of their employees to ensure compliance with the applicable legal regulations.
